- ☐ Open Chrome's security settings. On a computer, select the three-dot More menu, then Settings, then Privacy and security, then Security.
 - ☐ Choose Enhanced protection if the trade-off suits you. It turns on the new suspicious site warnings, Gemini scam checks and copied-command warnings.
 - ☐ Stay on Standard protection if you'd rather not share every address. You keep warnings for known dangerous sites without sending Google the full address of every site you visit.
 - ☐ Never paste a command a web page tells you to run to fix an error. Close the tab instead.
 - ☐ Consider Enhanced Safe Browsing for your Google Account too. Google recommends turning it on for your account as well as in Chrome, which extends the protection to Gmail.
