- ☐ Check your phone first. Confirm it runs Android 11 or newer, or iOS 16.4 or newer, and that you are happy to use a Google Account and the Google Health app.
 - ☐ Confirm the health feature you want works in Australia. Ask Google about ECG, SpO2, skin temperature or irregular-rhythm notifications before ordering, because each is limited by country, and ask when Health Guardian trends arrive, because the Australian page marks them as coming soon.
 - ☐ Decide whether you will pay for coaching. Google Health Coach needs Google Health Premium, which renews at A$14.99 a month after the three-month offer.
 - ☐ Set a cancellation reminder. If you take the three-month Premium offer, set a reminder before the three months end; it renews at A$14.99 a month unless cancelled.
 - ☐ Budget for a charger. The box includes a USB-C fast-charging cable but no power adapter; Google's charging figures assume a 30W adapter, sold separately.
 - ☐ Ask about battery replacement. Google says repair options vary by region, so check what is available in Australia.
 - ☐ Treat health readings as general information. Google says its blood pressure and insulin resistance trends are for general wellness, not a substitute for professional medical advice; take concerns to your doctor.
